“In FIFA 20, there was a vibrant ball movement in the ball physics,” said Senior Producer Gareth Williams. “A lot of what we learn from our fans about how they play is amplified with ‘HyperMotion’ and we’re excited to be unveiling the world’s first gameplay-altering FIFA feature.” “Through the player interaction with the ball, the ball reacts differently on each pitch, so the player will be able to respond accordingly,” said Lead Player Scenario Developer Pierre-Alexandre Jean. “At the same time, the player will also be able to assign the ball to an on-screen teammate in very specific situations.” Today we're bringing you a first look at some of the features from FIFA 22, including a deeper understanding of how the game’s AI works, improvements to the way the game pitches up, the complete overhaul of advanced attacking and deep-lying play. We’ll be diving deeper into the AI and ball physics too. Another central feature for FIFA 22 is “Real Player Motion.” This visual overhaul delivers up-to-date imagery of the game's 22 real-life players, with real-life players in real-life shots. It’s also something we’ve been working on since FIFA 20, improving the level of realism in player animations as well as textures. Full Article: During this year's FIFA World Cup in Russia, we got some insight into how the game's AI might play against not just the real-life international teams, but also against teams from the Hero Asian Leagues, that play fast, ultra-competitive football. To develop the AI in FIFA, we consulted leading domestic coaches from a number of Asian countries who are building winning football teams by studying FIFA through their own state-of-the-art tactics. We also got some new insight into the next generation of ball-kicking AI, as well as some of the leading technology trends for FIFA games going into this year's FIFA World Cup. A deeper look into the AI When working on the game, you play thousands of iterations of the game on your own. This means that when it comes to player behaviour, AI perceptions, and overall decisions on how to play the game, it takes a lot of time to get it right. To work on this end of the game things in the game is the ball, and the ball in FIFA 22 will feel more responsive as we continue to adapt the physics of the ball to the requirements of the next-generation consoles. The weight of the ball is also greater than in previous FIFA games and more accurate than ever, and will feel more responsive to the player's input through greater player control. The player will be granted more and more options to control the ball, while the evolution of dribbling also ensures that players can have more individual expression.

CUE THE BALL The introduction of Player Control is first and foremost in FIFA 22 as the player will be given more and more options to control the ball, through more dribbling styles, such as high or low, and more precise chip balls. The player will have even more control over the ball through a wider range of body placement, movement and contact, including the ability to alter the intended direction of the ball with a flick. The ball will also be heavier than ever with the introduction of the Interactive A.I. (v0.9), which allows the player to execute more dribbling and chip shots and shoot more accurately.

NEW ANCHORED EFFECTS The player will also notice immediate physical feedback when he or she strikes the ball, including the new dynamic shield effect and greater ball-ball contact with the ground, allowing more realistic studs and dirt formations. COME TOGETHER, CLING TOGETHER FIFA 22 will also reintroduce long-requested ball physics, including the introduction of anchor effects, and other more accurate and fluid ball behaviours such as long passing
