He has been the President of Unison since 2018, and is the current chair of the Northern Industrial Relations Commission. Daly was a full-time teacher for the Bradford and Huddersfield Education Service. He later became a classroom assistant, before taking a full-time lecturing post at Open University. He remained in this role for ten years, before becoming an NUT delegate. In 2015, Daly became the NUT's general secretary. In this role, he focused particularly on the role of women in unionism, and became known for his work in promoting women into senior positions. He was also active in the campaign to cut the allowances for trade union officials. Daly is a member of the Labour Party, and stood in Edgware at the 2010 general election. He stood for the position of NUT general secretary again at the 2016 election, but lost.
